

USING THE MLA FORMAT

The information in this handout, taken from The MLA Handbook for Writers of Research Papers, 7th edition, covers many cases in research papers when outside sources will need to be credited. For additional information about other cases, consult the MLA Handbook at the reference desks located throughout the Libraries.

Important! Be sure to check with your instructor as to whether he or she prefers underlined or italicized titles.

CITATIONS IN THE BODY OF THE PAPER

When you omit the author's name in your sentence:

One researcher has found that dreams move backward in time as the night progresses (Dement 71).

When you mention the author's name in your sentence:

Freud states that "a dream is the fulfillment of a wish" (154).

When you cite more than one work by the same author:

One theory emphasizes the principle that dreams express "profound aspects of personality" (Foulkes, Sleep 184). But investigation shows that young children's dreams are "rather simple and unemotional" (Foulkes, "Dreams" 78).

When the work has two or three authors:

Psychologists hold that no two children are alike (Gesell and Ing 68).

When a work has no author, begin with the word by which the title is alphabetized in the "Works Cited" list:

Random testing for steroids use by athletes faces strong opposition by owners of several teams ("Steroids" 22).

CITATIONS IN THE "WORKS CITED" LIST

Double space all entries and list in alphabetical order by author's last name. Generally, entries have three main divisions (author, title, and publication information), each followed by a period and two spaces. See the MLA Handbook and Web sites listed on the handout entitled "Citation Styles for the WWW" for additional examples and advice.
